LATEST FROM THE CAMP.

A Gaucho shot dead by an English m.

Yesterday morning the thriving little town of Moron was thrown into the greatest excitement by the arrival of an Englishman in irons, en route for the town. The prisoner is a young man of respectability and capitol, who carried on a grocery store in the Villa Luxan. It appears that a few days ago the prisoner (whose name is Flower) started from the Villa Luxan in a cart, to a pulperia about seven leagues distant, near Navarro, kept by a man named Sheahan. At this place the prisoner passed the night, and on the following morning, when about to harness his horse, a gaucho (Correntino) came up, and told him that he would not allow him to leave yet, adding that if he attempted to leave or harness the horse after this notice, he would run him through with his knife. Flower, not wishing to get into a fight or squabble, and as the teniente alcalde was in the house at the time, applied to him to order the Correntino off. We cannot say whether the story current about the alcalde is true or not, but Flower waited inside for fifteen minutes in the hope that the fellow would be sent about his business. He then went out again, and having got a yard from the door, when the bloodthirsty villain rushed on the poor fellow with a long 'facon.' Some of the people about the place interfered, and tried to hold the Correntino in, but it was all to no purpose; he cut right and left with his knife, and would have wounded these people had they not let him go. Flower watched the villain as he came up on him, and taking out a splendid Colt's revolver, told him if he advanced another step he was a dead man: the gaucho did advance, and actually stabbed Flower, but his watch luckily prevented the weapon reaching his heart. The bystanders had called on him, more than once, to fire, and his life being now in jeopardy he shot the gaucho through the throat.

Flower, standing over the dead gaucho, appealed to the bystanders if they had witnessed the affair, and if they attached any blame to him. They all stated that he had no alternative, and that the gaucho deserved to be shot. Flower then stated that he would go at once to the Villa Luxan and inform the authorities. The dead gaucho was thrown into the cart, and Flower drove away. On arriving in the Villa Luxan Flower presented himself and the corpse to the authorities, informing the judge of the whole circumstances of the case, and offering to prove his statements. Flower, although well-known to the judge as a peaceable respectable foreigner, was at once put in irons. He was sent into Moron on Monday, and from thence forwarded to town. We feel bound to say that the Juez de Paz of the Villa Luxan has promised to use his exertions to get the poor Englishman out as quickly as possible. Flower is in the employ of a public prison, at present; his house of business is shut up, and his property injured by property, simply because he shot the man who attempted to assassinate him. If there is any law or justice in the country, we appeal to it in behalf of our imprisoned countryman, who, acting in self-defence, rid the country of one of those villains who infest the camp. We appeal to every the thanks of our community at large instead of incarceration in a felon dungeon.

Another Irishman Murdered.

We have received the following details of a most atrocious and coldblooded assassination, committed in the district of Azul.

On the evening of September 22nd at sunset two gauchos came up to the house of Mr. Nicholas Saunders, a respectable Irishman of the neighborhood of Azul. They asked permission to stop for the night, which was immediately granted, the only inhabitants of the rancho being poor Saunders, his married daughter and her infant. The gauchos then proceeded to the kitchen, one preparing a dish of 'asado,' and the other going to assist Saunders to shut in the flock, after which he returned. In a few moments both the ruffians rushed into the daughter's room, and took the infant from her arms, threatening to kill it if she did not deliver up all the money in the house. She gave them $900, they said it was not enough: she then gave them a $500 note, whereupon they inquired if it was $5,00 and she answered 'Yes.' They then took all the best clothes they could find. Meantime the daughter escaped through a window overlooking the 'corral,' at the entrance of which she found her father murdered.

Poor Saunders was not quite dead, but opening his eyes and extending his right hand to his daughter, he exclaimed She returned by the same window, and saw the assassins saddling their horses: she hid herself behind the door of her father's room, and they came in with drawn knives, looking through the rooms. Finding no one, they mounted their gallopers and left. She then waited half-a-league, with her babe in her arms, to her uncle's house, and there found shelter. One of the assassins had slept at Mr. Saunders' house several times before. He is deformed of the left hand (manco). There are several patrols out, looking for them. Deceased had received a wound on the left side, which penetrated the heart, and 8 stabs in the back. He was a most industrious, aged about 64, and very industrious habits. Not long since, he sent home a remittance of £40 to his family in Ireland; and Mr. Nicholson principal of the English Seminary, has actually in hands £20 for the same, purpose recently, forwarded by the unhappy victim of the gaucho's knife.

Deceased had been in the country two years, and leaves a wife and five children. He was universally respected, a hard-working man, and an excellent neighbour.

Such are the particulars of this brutal murder. It is to be hoped justice will speedily overtake the fiends, and that Government should take some decisive steps to rid the country of those prowling assassins, by making a few examples.

A HUMAN MONSTER.

On yesterday a youth of some 20 years was conveyed prisoner to Moron, by train, and thence sent by diligence to the Juez de Paz. He is charged with having committed no fewer than 12 barbarous murders, and various abominable acts of lust. He has a most ill-favored offspring of white and Indian parents, and has a most diabolical expression of countenance. Although apparently only 20 years old, he has the carriage with indecent levity, and laughed and joked, about the journey before him. His manner while in gaol was in a fiend in malice, and even the wild Pampas have scarcely yet produced a monster of such untold iniquities. Of course, he denies the whole charge, but we were surprised to see some passengers travelling in the same train with him. Certainly it is necessary to have the Evil Spirit himself, than a wretch who has so disgraced Humanity, for a travelling companion. We hope that he may not escape on the trial, but meet the ignominious death he has so often merited. It is with pain we say this half-caste has a train of criminals, and several officers must be implicated for such enormities, before the camp will be properly purged.

THE ORIENTAL WAR.

We have received the "Gaceta Nacional," of Paysandu, 4th inst. Wilino Urquiza returned to Salto, 1st instant, at the head of 300 men, after securing the county north of the Arapey. He brought a troop of 600 horses, having cut to pieces a band of seventy rebels under one Rogelio, who had killed, with his sword, two other, capturing 25 of the freebooters, now in prison.

General Lamas is transporting, near Corralito, 200 Entre Rian volunteers under Colonel Gallo, to fight for the Oriental Government.

Latest reports of Flores say that a large number of his men was killed or drowned at the pass of Polanco, the rest deserting and falling into Medina's ands, except some 200 who still follow he Billinster's fortunes. Moreno's ranguard, on the 30th ult., was within ur leagues of the Yi, but Medina has ushed on so far in pursuit of the fugiives, that his whereabouts is not known in Laguna's arrival at Mercedes, he found the rebel band of Lavrolla completely broken up. Groups of from six to ten freebooters, driving horses before them, have been seen at Quinteros, Villalobas, and Maciel.

IMAGINARY CONVERSATIONS.

Scene—Nat. Government house, office of P. Affairs.

Drs. R. Elizalde and J. C. Gomez seated at a table.

Gomez—My dear Rufino, I've just come to say
That eighty mercenaries start to-day,
In vehicles for the Oriental coast,
To land wherever it may please them most,
Taking of arms and supplies a store—
I wish, indeed, they numbered some few more.
For I'm afraid our friends of t'other side,
If they don't run, will find themselves hard tried.

Elizalde—We've done our best; but tell me where is Flores?
Of late I've heard such strange and awful stories,
That I believe you'd better stop these eighty,
Their aid in such a time cannot be weighty.
Don't believe a word of the Tribuna,
For Mariano is "Imbrecado a la luna."
And Flores now has lost fifteen hundred of the Cerro.
That's no hope left, to capsize Dr. Berro.
I even hear that at the pass Polanco
A victory has been gained by that d—d "blanco.'
Now as a Minister, in sage reality,
I must uphold a strict course of neutrality,
And I will certainly invoke the laws on
All those who break it. But here's Dr. Rawson!

Enter Prime Minister and loquitur.
Good evening, gentlemen, I almost guess
You're quoting me and you into a mess.
I'm blamed for keeping such a naughty fellow
For my advisee, as Dr. M. Varela;
But I'm resolved, as sure as my name's Will,
To stop him, for he does a world of ill.
This Flores' business has been quite a fiasco,
And caused a second war with Mr. Cleeche.
Besides there is Brazil and Paraguay,
With whom, I fear, we'll have the del'il to pay;
And with Becour and Lamas 'tis, de va'de
To think that you can cope, friend Elizalde.
We must keep up the rebels, solo vola;
For such is Fate, and so says Don Bartolo.
Gomez—All is not lost, good sir—although I'm sad,
Varela's shipped, and Aguilars dead—
Flores has yet a band of daring raiders,
Who'll prove their title to be called Crusaders.
Librators, heroes, veterans, and so-forth.
Although the Standard says they're going north."
Dear Rawson and Ingenuity now probe us,
But I'll seek kind relief from Golfy Obes.
Calvo may jeer, I'll bear it all with patience,
And ship my eighty men with three days' rations.
But I regret that horticultural carve
Should lose the Ministeres of Foreign Affairs
And of the Interior, for their special patronage.
Such is the faith of our Argentine Athens.

EXTRAORDINARY ACCIDENT.

On Monday the inhabitants of the southern part of the city were startled with the news that a burglar had been caught in a quinta near the corner of Calles San Juan and Chacabuco. A crowd immediately gathered round the place. After considerable difficulty the police succeeded in hauling up out of an old well the corpse of the robber, who was armed with a brace of pistols, a long dagger-knife, and some half-dozen false keys. It appears that the fellow got into the quinta in the dark, and, by trying to get into the house, walked into the old well in the patio, where he was immediately drowned. The body has not been identified.

MONTEVIDEO

(From our Correspondent.)

October 3, 1863.

To-day we have no news. The Colorados have tried all means in their power to-day or yesterday, to circulate a "rumor" that Medina's vanguard is seen defeated, but it is untrue, as it is not to be done by Flores at all events.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

It is with pleasure that we inform our readers that there is reason to believe the assassin of Kirby and Devere has been condemned and sentenced to death. The strongest feelings of humanity urge us to demand, for the safety of camp residents, that this cold blooded murderer be removed from society. Vae putatibi!

An eye-witness of poor Smith's last moments, after the fatal accident on board the 'Esmeralda,' requests us to mention that the Cura of San Nicolas not only permitted his remains to be interred within the Catholic cemetery, but even caused a tree to be planted over his grave. The Paraguayan steamers hung their flags half-mast high, decented having been three years in that service. It was the only support of his mother and sisters.

The buses for 11 Setiembre, at the invitation of Mr. A. Wilkinson, reduced the fare last week to $2, and now, for further politeness, to $1. The Western Railway buses have also come down, from $3 to $2. This is very cheap. Success to the owners.

Our columns to-day contain three terrible proofs of the dangerous state of our roads, and more particularly stations of lost year, touching the G. Mon-to-video. If Government do not bestir itself to open into an efficient public thoroughfare, and shoot every murderer without delay, we shall soon be in the condition of California in 1849.

On Friday last, an Irish Arkwright despatched a quantity of lumber for Moreno; but going in search of same on Saturday he was surprised to find the timber was carried (!!) into the Cerro. Our friend was put to the expense of keeping his carts at Moreno owing to the roads being impassable.

Governor Sarmiento seems slow to accept his mission to Washington. There is much guessing about the new envoys to Asuncion and Rio Janeiro. D. Vorberto Reistra is spoken of for the former.

The vacant portfolio has not yet been disposed of, in the National Cabinet. The 'Tribuna' states that Marmol will probably be named to succeed Medina for Foreign Affairs; the latter being now Finance Minister. Others say Reistra will succeed Saavedra, and the Foreign Secretary remain as he is; but it is very doubtful that the former would sit in the present Cabinet.

We commend to the attention of our readers a communication respecting Church music. We think our correspondent has really good room for complaint, and hope that some of our readers will call the attention of the Bishop to the matter.

The widows are still about the Congress Square, and our friend Biraldo finds now that, like Do Boots of the Grampian, he too has put his 'foot in it.' If we don't manage to get clear of the Cerro, the whole financial state of the country will be ruined. These females dans are flocking in from all quarters. Ten thousand widows will be about the place before Congress in a few days more, if the deputies will give the exorbitant time to draw up the petitions.

Our advices about Flores are to the 1st. Dr. Syntax arrived out in good spirits, and to catch a glimpse of the man as he floated down the Yi River, seated comfortably on an algaroba branch—Old Nick on one side of the river and Medina on the other, both ready hard-at-it to aim and trying to catch him before he escaped. Medina had thrown away his sword, and fighting, and especially fishing rod: he felt confident that if Old did not let him land o.: the opposite bank he would catch him 'with a hook.'

By last advices from Europe we observe that there are several vessels loading in Liverpool for Buenos Ayres, and that they had an aggregate of 6,000 passengers engaged. What a pity it is that we cannot get out here many Irishmen as Italians. Could we but effect this, what a difference in a few years would we have in Buenos Ayres!

To-morrow the far-famed violinist, M. Jullien, will give his first public performance in Buenos Ayres. The programme is full of music will not fail to attend at Colon.

As usual, the tramway and Northern Railway will run numerous trains on next Sunday: in fact, the cars were unable to carry all the passengers.

It is said that a number of recruits are waiting to get paid the full bounty money promised them, to start for the Banda Oriental. Poor Flores! how dare you look to pay now, besides writing letters to his beloved Anaita.

The Bolsa was crowded yesterday with visitors. Some thought it was for the marble statuette, but we are creditably informed that the object of attention was the Porter's celebrated 'grey' goose hat.

There is an extraordinary story current about a recent difficulty between no well-known gentlemen in a matter of honor, there is a lady's name mixed up in the matter. She also went to visit the Bolsa, possibly to see this remarkable hat.

CHURCH MUSIC.

Gentlemen—During the late festive ceremonies at the Merced and San Miguel churches in this city, the music played was, I regret to say, far more suited to a second class theatre than the temple of Divine worship.

Although without any extra religious pretensions, I do assert that the music in the majority of the churches is so coarse and vulgar that it reminds me more of the "mumbo jumboism" of the Yes-ges than anything else.

Perceiving that the columns of your paper are always open to every well founded complaint, I trust, gentlemen, you will call the attention of the Bishop to this heathenish abuse. Sacred music in the temple of the living God, when soundly attended to and properly executed, tends to charm and humanize, not to disgust and annoy. At one of the ceremonies above named I was horrified to hear one of the most beautiful of sacred compositions played to the time of an Irish jig or Scotch reel. The bands at the Retiro play tolerably every evening; and I see no impediment to ask why good music for our pleasure grounds is provided, and the house of God neglected.

I am not a heathen, nor a disciple of Tom Paine, neither am I a Jesuit nor a French-can Friar, but I object to playing "to beg goes the Weasel," or "Come let us be happy together" in our churches. It is, gentlemen, an abuse which calls for immediate reformation, and then for the singing-girls I have never been on the west coast of Africa, or assisted at a meeting of Affiun Banquets, but from the description I have read I am disposed to be convinced that either some of the disciples of that religious society of New York basket meetings, or the musicians of the Negro churches, or a few of Consul Hutchison's south African acquaintances have left their country, for anything equal the music discord at the Merced was never before heard in this benighted city. Gentlemen, I do verily believe that the discordant noise churches are afflicted with swollen tonsils or ulcerous sore throats.

It is a miserable thing when one goes to church with the best intentions, and with a sincere desire to look after his immortal soul, to be disturbed in the most unmercifully down stairs until one succeeds in making his bones like his cracked voice. With a-ch sensation, I stared from my place in the Merced church the other day, and was restrained from executing my intention solely by the sense of respect which I had for the church and the congregation.

I confess no surprise at hearing the "Regnes's march," or that popular Spanish melody called "Padre Francisco" in the churches of our little country towns, but I do say that I am astonished that equal abuses are permitted in Buenos Ayres.

May I ask, sirs, is it possible that there are none in this city who understand sacred music, or is it not evident that the congregations are so penurious that only a set of Paraguayan orange vendors can be afforded. I implore of you, Mr. Standard, to insist upon the immediate dismissal of these organ grinders who at present infest our churches, and distract our devotions with badly played waltzes, polkas, potpourries and mazurkas.

As a stranger in this city I crave you will pardon me for asking you to inform me whether the bishop does really engage the persons on state occasions or not. If he does, gentlemen I will wager any amount that the person who attempted the Gloria in Excelsis last week, in the Merced, was the self same individual who passes every night under my bedroom window in Calle Maypu shouting banana sanaza y melonaza.

Yours respectfully,
PARISIONER.

THE BRITISH LIBRARY.

Buenos Ayres, Oct. 5, 1863.

Gentlemen—In addition to your many gratuitous services to the British Library, please to insert the following appeal in order to oblige a "Standard," and oblige

Your obedient servant,
A CONSTANT READER.

Decisions and punctuality are qualities on which our country must place themselves, and form prominent elements in the national character, which we are all bound to cultivate and uphold.

We are reluctant to admit any indications of degeneracy, or to accept the theory of the current of history ever retrograding. Still "facts are stubborn things," and must be denounced in order that they may be corrected, in order to avoid greater evils. Even in the public meeting called for this evening is the fourth appeal that has been made to the members of the British Library Reading Room, on a very simple subject, but one that may affect the interests of a public institution, in which all the members are equally concerned. Whence this apathy? It is, to say the least, unbusinesslike and un-English.

Those who voted for the revision of the rules and regulations in 1862, and those who pledged themselves at the last annual general meeting, are bound in duty, honor and consistency to attend two or three hours in the evening can not be reckoned a great sacrifice in behalf of an institution second to none in social importance.

THE PAMPERO CASE.

The documents referring to this case have been at last published. The incipal witness, on the part of the commander of the steamer, is our friend, Mr. Caladilla, who, by some unlucky circumstance, happened to be on board at the time. His statement is as follows:—"I found myself on board the Pampero when the occurrence complained of took place. The Pampero had sent her pilot to the 'Guardia Nacional,' and on Saturday, the 30th of August, we navigated, without a pilot, from Martin Garcia to the mouth of the Guazu, but experienced considerable danger and inconvenience for the want of a pilot. The commander resolved to call up some of the captains of the small vessels, which were anchored on account of contrary winds, with the intention to take their vessel in tug, provided the captain would act as pilot on the steamer. The captain of a little schooner, the name of which I forget, (but she was Spanish) came on board and took charge of the steamer, and we pursued our way, taking the little boat in tug. At sundown we anchored almost alongside the Villa del Salto; the captain, who acted as pilot went on board his own vessel, and lay close up to the Villa del Salto. The little schooner we understood is called 'Cabera del Negro,' fronting the Yaguary. That same night I left the Pampero, there being nothing to prevent me, which I was sent, namely, to take the evidence of an officer, called Manano, and myself and secretary left almost immediately for Buenos Ayres."

This is Mr. Caladilla's story, and, we must say, a more unlikely one we never heard. In the first place, it seems incredible that an Argentine war vessel, sailing up and down these rivers, should be so badly commanded, that she would run aground in the middle of the broadest and safest part of the river, without a pilot.

In the second place Mr. Caladilla purposely avoids stating what was on board the little boat which they tugged up. In fact, from the Sergeant Major's statement, which he took, we are inclined to believe that she really had a cargo of filibusters on board.

MR. LETTSOM'S CASE.

Montevideo, Oct. 3, 1863.

Gentlemen,

Your Montevideo correspondent would do well to follow the advice lately given by you, and "mind his own business."

The words placed in inverted commas, and purporting to be a quotation from Mr. Lettsom's letter, are not so.

I cannot help thinking that people ought to be more scrupulous in making use of names, without the consent of the parties concerned. A certain wise man long ago wrote—"The foal easteth abroad freckenads, and saith, 'it is but spot.'"

Yours obediently,
JOHN MACCOLL.

By referring to our published statement of the case in our correspondence, as a passenger we will add a "rider" to our friend of Mr. MacColl's."—Ed. Standard.

STATE OF AMERICA.

ALBANY, NEW YORK, JULY 29—There is something unfathomable in the feelings of the American people at this hour. Whatever might be the opinion of the public mind before the battle of Gettysburg, there is no doubt now as to the full confidence of every man out of a hundred Northerners in the destinies of the Union. The current of the public mind is now as full of confidence that the Mississippi have re-assured the wavering. The subjugation of the South is now, the Americans think, in any event a mere question of time, and, whatever difficulties there may arise as to the footing upon which the Union is to be reconstructed, there is no doubt as to the Union itself being saved.

The readiness and willingness to look upon the cause of this country as despotical and unconstitutional on the part of England towards the Americans. Mix fee ly with the gentler classes of persons will be witnessed by every one removed from public life, search deep into the heart of those who are less reply to imbrue the views and opinions of the community at large in their leading politicians, and you will find, I believe, that these people are above all things Americans, and that they look upon their vast and mongrel community with all the tenderness of an all-embracing, all-engrossing nationality. You are aware that between the latter and the Indeed do these shores a score or so of years ago and the son who was born to him after landing, there can be no great divergence of wishes or purpose—yet on any great international question the other will be prompted to dictate he has read a Briton; the son will side with or with the people among whom he was born—he will feel and act as an American.

LOCAL EVENTS.

STONE THROWING.—On Saturday evening, as the last train was passing from the Irish Convent to the 11 Setiembre, a youthful ruffian threw a piece of brick, which smashed one of the windows, and almost wounded a passenger, in the face. This is not the first time.

MORON STATION.—One of the pillars supporting the verandah was knocked down, a fortnight ago, by a train, carrying some lumber projecting transversely. The shapeless blocks of masonry are still there, no repairs having been made. It will probably remain so, until a strong pampero comes and carries the whole ahead away.

COSTA PERALTA.—The new station of the Western railway will be placed here, which is nearly half way between Moreno and Luxan. The earthworks are concluded to a distance of 4 leagues from the present terminus, but M. Roquet complains that he cannot procure more than 68 "navvies." None but Basques need apply.

THE LUNATICS have, at length, been lodged in the Asylum of the Convalescencia. We hear nothing of the Southern cemetery.

ESTANCIA REMEDIOS.—The auction of this estancia did not not take place yesterday, it having been postponed to an indefinite period. Some say it will not come off at all; that the assignees of Mr. Halbach's estate have forbidden it.

CATTLE.—We hear that the Indians have lately carried off large herds from our frontier, and that President Mitre has not fulfilled his promise 'to be responsible for every cow'-tail in the province.'

DOUBLOONS.—The Finance Department fixes the Custom's rate of doubloons at 433½ for the week, 6th to 11th instant.

NO SESSION.—Congress does not seem anxious to profit of the prolongation. The senators did not sit yesterday.

MISCELLANY.

A FEMALE SCOUT.—A Frederick correspondent of the 'Philadelphia Inquirer' furnishes the following account of the adventures of Mr. Thomas O'Harter, Federal detective :—"Mr. O. Harter, in performance of his duty as a government scout, started for Williamsport on Friday last, and suddenly found himself within the line of federal pickets, and was arrested. He was in citizen's dress, and, being questioned, stated that he was a resident of Hagerstown, being desirous of viewing the battle-field of Gettysburg, had come up for that purpose, but, finding that both armies had removed from that locality, he had determined to go on towards Williamsport, as he expected a battle would take place in that vicinity, and he desired to witness it. This story was received with some doubts by the rebels, who seemed to suspect him, but as he had nothing about him to indicate that he was in government service, they merely placed him under guard, along with two or three other citizen prisoners, who had been arrested along, to prevent them giving information of Lee's movements to the Union troops. At Williamsport, on Sunday night, Mr Harter determined to escape. The night was dark and rainy. The prisoners were sleeping on the wet ground, and the guard near him had sat down on the grass with his musket between his knees, and, throwing his blanket over his head to protect it from rain, had just settled himself in a comfortable state—half sleep and half wake. There was a clump of trees about one hundred yards distant from the prisoners were, the ground towards which sloped gently towards the river bank. Watching his opportunity, Mr. Harter commenced rolling himself over and over towards the bushes, and finally succeeded in reaching them without alarming the guard. Once in the bushes, he rose and widened the distance between himself and the guard; and, knowing the locality well, sought an hospital near the canal, where lived a friend who kindly took him in, secreted him, and kept him until nearly noon, when, seeing the rebel army preparing to move, he went out boldly amongst them, assuming to be a citizen of Williamsport. Mr Harter saw thousands of cattle swimming across the Potomac, and learned that from the time the rebels first came into Maryland scarcely a day passed that they did not press over large droves of cattle, sheep, and horses in the same way, the product of their thieving operations in Pennsylvania and Maryland."

INDENITY REWARDED.—In noticing the recent dings of the late meeting of the Prince Consort's Windsor Association, the local Express stated that "Mr. Beames, a footman, sent a tea-caddy, urn stand, bucket, tobacco pipe, &c., observing of the highest commendation, more particularly the tea-caddy which is inlaid with different ornamental woods in a manner which would not have disgraced a regular artisan." At the Exhibition Beames was induced to forward the urn-stand to the Prince of Wales, humbly soliciting the honour of the Prince's acceptance of the article. At the same time Beames forwarded the tools he had used in the production of the tea-chest. These consisted merely of an ordinary chisel, a smoothing-plane a saw made out of a common dinner-knife, and an old pen-knife, and with the latter the whole of the chiselling or engraving was done. The stand was on inlaid piece of furniture, the sides being inlaid with various descriptions of wood, standing five inches in height and a foot square. At the top, on a diamond-shaped piece of inlaid box, the Royal arms were chased out or engraved; whilst at each corner, on sycamore wood, were cut out the Prince of Wales's feathers, three in a cluster. His Royal Highness has gratified the ingenious workman by accepting the present; and, through Garrard and Co., has forwarded Beames a present of three guineas! The General, in his letter accompanying the money, adds that his Royal Highness thanks him for his interesting work, and that the Prince has expressed his opinion that the work does great credit to Mr. Beames, especially when it is considered with what tools it was executed." He resides in Alpha-place, Slough.—London Paper.

HAPPINESS.—Trifles make up the happiness or the misery of mortal life. The majority of men slide into their graves without having encountered on their journey whither any signal catastrophe or exaltation of fortune or feeling. Collect a thousand ignited sticks into a heap, and you have a bonfire which may be seen over three counties. If, during thirty years, the annoyances connected with shirt-buttons found missing when the hour for horrible dressing is come, 120 do were gathered into a mass and endured at once, it would be misery equal to public execution. If, from the same space of time, all the little infinitesimals of vanity were gathered into one lump of honey and enjoyed at once, the pleasure of being crowned with laurel would be much greater. If the equanimity of an ordinary man be at the mercy of trifles, how much more will the equanimity of the man of riches, who is usually the most sensitive of the race, and whose peculiar avocation makes sad work with trifles! Since the nervous system is composition is, I take it, with the exception of the crank, in which there is neither hope nor result, the most exasperating to which a man can be subject by himself.—Dreamthorp. By Alexander Smith.

A NEW WAR VESSEL.—A new war vessel is in course of construction at Cincinnati. The strange craft is known as "Elliott's War Turtle," It is shaped like a large mammoth fish, with the propeller in the form of a turbine wheel, placed at the bottom, and so arranged as to take water in through eight radial tubes, which can be opened or closed by valves, the said tubes connecting with the propeller and outer edge of hull of the vessel. The propeller passes the water received from its cylinder and revolves always in the same direction, and when the vessel is to be backed forward in any direction one or more of the valves is opened, thereby relieving the pressure on that side, while the pressure still remains on the opposite side of the vessel. The turret is very similar in appearance to those on the monitors, but is built exceedingly low in the top of the hull, and lined inside with heavy timber. It revolves with the boat by the action of the water upon the guides placed in the middle of the deck of the boat. It mounts four guns.—New York World.

FATAL DREAMTHORP. By Alexander Smith.

FATAL DREAMTHORP.—A despatch received at Lloyd's on Saturday, through the Marine department of the Board of Trade, from the English consul at Buenos Ayres, was merely to the effect that of the British ship Rospidaden, Captain Joss, commander, bound to Liverpool from Callao, and, it is feared, the loss of two boats with their crews. The ill-fated ship struck the east coast of South America, off Cape Tres Puntas, in lat. 47 S., and the evening was dark, but during a thick mist, the wind blowing a gale from the north. The master and crew took to the boats and abandoned her. The long boat, in which were the captain and four hands, on the day after leaving the wreck the long boat side of the other two boats containing the remainder of the crew, and nothing had been heard or seen of them since. Fears are entertained even to fear that the worst has befallen them. The ship was loaded with a cargo of general merchandise, and her loss must necessarily be a considerable one. The whole number of vessels destroyed by the rebel privateers, up to the present time, is 130, comprising 1 gunboat, 1 steamer, 1 steam-tug, 30 ships, 24 barques, and 43 schooners, amounting to 61,420 tons, valued at $11,000,000; 4,000 tons of coal, cargo, $400,000; making a total loss of $11,000,000.—American paper.

THE RAILWAY MUTINY.—Disturbances have occurred on the railway of the Waterford and Kilkenny Railway before an approaching engine. Luckily, the driver was able to stop the train before the engine was on him, or a wreck would have immediately occurred, and carried off as prisoner. He then dived into the bushes, and the train went on in good flight, and as the railway company could only prosecute him for a trespass, he was let off.

Notwithstanding the large increase of our traces in New Zealand, we believe it is not likely that any addition will be made to the general staff during the present operations. The regiment going on there from India and Ceylon—the 60th, and 99th—will, of course, take with them their own officers; with them, too it is not improbable that, in addition to this, some increase of the medical staff may be found necessary before long.—Army and Navy Gazette.

At Manchester, a few days ago, two factory girls quarrelled, and began to fight at Stretford, to which place they went, accompanied by a large number of boys and girls. They threw off their bonnets and shawls, and having drawn a line they toed it. The combatants agreed on were that there should be no bullet biting or scratching. After several rounds, in the course of which flats only were used, both fell, and a third on the ground, and so went until almost insensible. They were both taken into custody.

Caution
COLLARD AND COLLARD'S
PIANOFORTES.

It having been intimated to Messrs. Collard and Collard, a manufacturer of Piano Fortes in London, that a certain Establishment in this City is about putting up for sale by auction, pianofortes and harmoniums bearing the name of Collard and Collard, they beg to caution the public against purchasing any instrument under such pretence, as they have not entrusted any one with the sale of their manufactures, nor have they any connection whatever with any establishment in the instrument trade in this City. They further beg to intimate that they have not appointed any commercial house agent for the sale of their instruments in this country, and that they are not responsible for any pianofortes sold in their name, except those bearing the number of their manufactory, and the signature of their firm, and they recommend purchasers to deal only with the most reliable houses, as the practice of counterfeiting is becoming extensive.
